History and Inspiration

Launched in the spring of 2024, the collection was conceived during a design sprint that blended Brown's signature minimalism with Romanian folklore motifs. The "inedit" (meaning "unpublished" in Romanian) label signifies that these designs are exclusive, never before seen outside the country. Brown's inspiration came from the vibrant colors of the Transylvanian countryside and the fluidity of the Danube River, translating into silhouettes that flow like water.

Design Philosophy

The core philosophy revolves around “less is more” while celebrating individuality. Each garment is crafted to be a statement piece that can transition seamlessly from a business meeting to an evening out. Brown’s design team meticulously selected fabrics that balance drape, structure, and breathability—essential qualities for Romania’s varied climate.

Unique Features

- Hand stitched Detailing: Each piece features subtle hand stitched accents, adding a layer of artisanal quality.
- Modular Elements: Some jackets and coats include detachable sleeves or collars, allowing wearers to adapt the garment to seasonal changes.
- Eco Friendly Dyeing: Fabrics are dyed using low impact, water saving techniques to minimize environmental footprints.

Design Highlights of the Collection

Fabric and Texture

The collection showcases a palette of premium natural fibers: organic cotton, Tencel, merino wool, and silk blends. Each material was chosen for its tactile comfort and durability. For instance, the signature trench coat is made from a 50/50 blend of merino wool and Tencel, offering warmth without bulk.

Color Palette

Inspired by Romania’s landscapes, the color scheme features earthy tones—deep forest green, terracotta, slate gray—paired with subtle pops of cobalt and blush. These hues are versatile, allowing wearers to mix and match effortlessly.

Silhouettes and Cut

From tailored blazers to fluid maxi dresses, the collection offers a range of silhouettes. The blazers boast a slightly relaxed fit, perfect for modern office environments, while the maxi dresses incorporate a cinched waist to accentuate feminine curves. Brown’s attention to detail ensures that each cut flatters a variety of body types.
