1. The Genesis of an Anthem

1.1 Early Roots of Canterbury Bulldogs Music

When the Canterbury-Bankstown Bulldogs were established in 1935, they quickly became a symbol of working class pride in the South West Sydney region. In the early days, the club's supporters relied on simple chants and drumbeats to show their support during matches. However, it wasn't until the late 1970s that a formal theme song emerged.

1.2 The Birth of the Official Theme

In 1985, the Bulldogs partnered with renowned composer and musician John "Jack" McKellar to create an official anthem. The result was a powerful, anthemic track titled "Rise of the Bulldogs", featuring soaring guitar riffs and a memorable chorus that quickly became synonymous with the club's identity.

The original recording was performed by a local choir and recorded at the iconic Sydney Opera House studio. It was first played at the club's home ground, Belmore Oval, during the 1986 NRL season, marking a new era of musical engagement for the team.
